Traditional Row Houses (Nagaya) in Nakazaki district, Osaka

Nakazaki district in Osaka is close to Umeda area, that is the main commercial and central business district, large traffic hub, as well as the principal office and hotel district, with over 40 prominent skyscrapers in the district. Umeda is also known for shopping: four of the city's largest department stores are located there, as well as several shopping malls. However Nakazaki district has maintained its traditional structure, morphology and environment which changed gradually over the last decades. This workshop will study on urban fabric of Nakasaki and the reconvert of their old traditional Row Houses named Nagaya.

Concept Design

- Concept design is point to point
 - A Road in public in there is so many way in town this Road is complicate and have a few rest place
 - And is complicate is town will make nobody Know the shop in town
- if many people know were the shop is it the town will have a good economy and they have a money to manage this town and they can be save some building is history in this town

Density of Building

- And in town have few of public space and this design space will build a space and the side of space have a somthing can rest
